

Instructions for accessing NYTimes Digital

On library computers:

1. Register or log in at www.nytimes.com/register
2. You can now enjoy unlimited access to NYTimes.com

To access this resource from either a remote location or through the library's WiFi, ask library staff for a 72-hour access code or click here.

With remote access you are given a 72-hour pass. Once this time period is up, you will need to click on the link directly above to get another 72-hour token. The tokens are essentially unlimited.

NYTimes Digital FAQ

How is accessing the NYTimes through the BRPL or with a remote pass any different from going directly to NYTimes.com?

Without a paid subscription or remote pass, nonsubscribers can access only 10 free articles (including blog posts, slide shows, videos and other multimedia features) each calendar month on NYTimes.com.

In Library use:

Can I set up my NYTimes Digital account using my own device in the library?

No, the initial account must be set up on one of the Library's public computers.

Remote access:

If I have created a NYTimes Digital account at the Library, do I need a remote pass to log in elsewhere?

Yes. Access in the library is only through the library's computers. If you want to use your own device and the library's Wi-Fi connection, you will need to use a remote pass.

Who are the remote passes for?

Remote passes are for BRPL card holders who have not yet created an account with the NYTimes, or want to establish a new account, and wish to access full content on their home PC, Mac or tablet.

How does the remote pass work?

The Library provides 72-hour passes allowing remote access to NYTimes Digital. Your expiration time will be displayed when you activate your pass.

How do I use my pass?

First, go to www.nytimes.com/redeemaccess and enter the activation code. Set up a user name (email address) and password. After activating a pass, use the NYTimes.com/login link to gain access. While logged in, you can access unlimited content from any network or location for the duration of your pass.

Can I activate a new pass before my current one expires?

No. Each NYTimes.com pass grants 72-hours of access. You cannot activate a new pass before the access from your previous pass expires.

To activate a new remote pass, return to www.nytimes.com/redeemaccess

I've already registered. How do I log on?

If you've already registered, just enter your ID and password at www.NYTimes.com/login. If you've forgotten your ID or password, please use the password reset tool.

I have activated a remote pass – what do I get?

NYTimes.com grants digital access to The New York Times from any network or location for a limited period of time. The BRPL's subscription allows NYTimes.com access from any PC + access via apps for iPhone, BlackBerry 10, Windows Phone 7+ and Android-powered phones.

Do I still have unlimited access if I log out of my NYTimes.com account?

During your period of unlimited access, you must be logged in to the NYTimes.com account with which you activated your pass. If you log out of your account or visit NYTimes.com on a device where you are not logged in, you can simply log in to your account to continue enjoying unlimited access.

Past issues:Can I access back issues?

Yes, you have access to the past 7 days of the NYTimes, provided you are on a PC or using the NYTimes App on one of these devices: iPhone, BlackBerry 10, Windows Phone 7+ and Android-powered phones. From a PC/Mac, click on "Today's Paper" at the top of the page. Next, click on the "try now" button. From here you can navigate to the date you wish to view. From a SmartPhone app, back issues cannot be viewed in their entirety. You must use the search box to retrieve individual articles. Results from the past 7 days will be displayed.

Can I access historical archives

Yes. All NYTimes.com Pass users have unlimited access to the New York Times archived articles outside the 1923–1980 date range. Users may access up to five free articles daily, published between the years 1923 through 1980. NYTimes apps are not supported on all devices. Passes do not include e-reader editions, Times Premier content or digital versions of The New York Times Crossword.